NSSA participates in Space experts panel discussion.

Manama, May 15 (BNA): The National Space Science Agency (NSSA) participated in a panel discussion under the slogan "Working together to sustain our future: what space has to offer and how we protect it", with the participation of experts from the United Kingdom, the European Union (EU), and the United States.

Amina Al Blaushi, Bahraini Space Engineer, participated as a keynote speaker and discussed the most prominent projects in the space sector.

The participants also discussed their current projects and visions for the future of the space sector, and their role in improving the quality of life on earth.

Al Balushi highlighted Bahrain's efforts in the space sector and presented NSSA's comprehensive and sustainable development achievements.

She reviewed the most significant current and future satellite design and development projects, analysis of space images and data, and the most critical research published, and scientific innovations created by NSSA's employees during the past two years.
